

It's been a year...

Looking for a way to reconnect, reinvigorate, revive, refresh?

Join consultant and author Debra Crouch in a virtual book study of Made for Learning, a book about what it means to help someone learn.

Who should attend?

Teachers, TOSAs, Coaches, District and Site Administrators—
If you help someone learn, whether that learner is a child or an adult, we would love to have your voice in the conversation.

Join as a school team, with a friend, or on your own. Breakout sessions will connect you with colleagues for thinking and talking.

There is no cost to attend (you may purchase the book at the link below).

This book study is not a course. There are no assignments to complete. The only credit is what you give yourself.

How will this five-session, five-week book study work?

Made for Learning will be read and discussed in five sections, one section per meeting.

During a week, four meeting times will be offered*. Each meeting in a week will focus on the same section of the book. You choose one of these meetings to attend in that week, whichever time and day best fits your schedule that week. (You do not need to decide in advance.)
